ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A radio signal receiving method grasps features of a propagation path at the start of communication and generates a template waveform corresponding to the features. A receiver examines a reception waveform of a propagation path condition judgment portion contained in a header portion of a packet, individually generates the template waveform in each communication session and performs correlation detection on the basis of the template waveform generated individually.